

RE|SOUND

ReSound: The European Sound Masters: Transforming the Future of Sound Education

Discover ReSound, a groundbreaking Erasmus Mundus Joint Master's Programme that reimagines the role of sound in culture, society, and the creative industries.

This two-year, four-semester journey elevates sound as a fully-fledged discipline and a starting point for exploring sound's profound connection to image, space, and experience.

Now entering its second year, ReSound equips graduates with the expertise to navigate diverse industries, from cinema to immersive media, video games, live events and beyond, offering boundless career opportunities.

A Unique Pan-European Collaboration

ReSound brings together expertise from three prestigious institutions within the FilmEU European University alliance:

- Institute of Art, Design and Technology (IADT) in Ireland

Leading the programme, IADT offers cutting-edge facilities for prospective sound students, providing an unparalleled environment to nurture creative and technical skills.

At the heart of the campus lies the prestigious National Film School, boasting state-of-the-art Film and TV studios designed for professional-level production.

Students have access to two Dolby Atmos mix suites and a 5.1 surround sound mixing suite, complete with a Foley recording stage and a dedicated vocal booth for precise audio work.

The immersive media production facility allows students to explore the frontier of sound in virtual and augmented reality projects.

- Universidade Lusófona (UL) in Portugal

Lusófona is well equipped for all work related to sound, from recording studios to post-production rooms.

There is a general-purpose recording studio featuring state-of-the-art equipment which can be used for both instrumental music and general sound projects such as sonic art, foley and voice-over.

- Lithuanian Academy of Music and Theatre (LMTA)

Lithuanian Academy of Music and Theatre's (LMTA) state-of-the-art facilities include a spatial sound sphere, two recording studios, video and audio editing workstations, a 99-seat cinema hall, as well as a specialised cinema hall for sound mixing and mastering, and two film studios.

Through Erasmus+ mobility, students experience a truly European education, studying across Europe while gaining an insight into alternative cultural and educational perspectives.

All ReSound students will study at each of the three locations over the duration of the programme.

This mobility broadens outlooks, fosters cross-cultural collaboration, and opens doors to international opportunities.

The Journey

Learn from Europe's best

Students enrolled in ReSound will learn from some of the most experienced industry professionals Europe has to offer.

Lecturers and tutors from IADT, Lusofona, and LMTA bring together a wealth of expertise in sound production, music technology, sound theory, and performance, ensuring that students receive unparalleled education and mentorship.

Industry-Focused, Future-Ready

ReSound is shaped by the needs of today's creative industries and the emerging paradigms of tomorrow.

Our programme prepares specialists in sound design, production, composition and execution across media arts—including film, television, gaming, immersive media, and virtual environments.

Graduates leave not only as industry-ready professionals but as advocates for the thoughtful integration of sound in society, reshaping how we hear the world around us.

Tuition & Scholarships

A maximum of 24 places are offered at ReSound each year. An Erasmus Mundus scholarship will be available only to a percentage of the available places.

For non-scholarship holders' participation costs/tuition fees for the whole study period of four semesters is 15,000 EUR.

This is to be paid in two instalments: 7,500 EUR before the beginning of the first semester, 7,500 EUR to be paid before the beginning of the third semester.

Erasmus Mundus scholarship holders do not have to pay participation costs/tuition fees.

Ready to amplify your future?

If you're a graduate with an interest in how sound can impact our experience of culture, society, or the creative industries, ReSound is the programme for you.

Apply now to join the ReSound European Joint Masters and immerse yourself in a transformative journey through sound.

Explore new cultures, collaborate across borders, and prepare for a career that shapes the future of the creative industries.

Start your ReSound journey today!

For more information and to apply visit ReSound website

Co-funded by the European Union ReSound can award Erasmus Mundus Scholarships on the basis of excellence.